LIFE

Your World is rapidly becoming a disaster zone but most people are unable to face the true reality of it. Unless those who can face this reality make serious effort to introduce others to reliable convincing evidence then, by the time the consequences are obvious, it will be too late.

Today, in almost every part of the world, the majority of people will not only claim to believe in freedom but will also claim that they are free. Around two thousand years ago Jesus of Nazareth suggested to an audience that they were not free people but they would not believe Him then; would they believe him today?

What important forces influence life today?

Money
Creation Belief

Not at the time of Jesus, not today: never in our recorded history have we been free people. In earlier times we were not free because we did not understand enough of our own nature and had not developed our intellectual spirit sufficient to know what communal freedom meant. It did not matter in those times because our primary development was programmed and those of us who would enslave others had not the knowledge to endanger us.

That is the difference between then and now.

The time of the ‘Watchers’ is excluded because ‘they’ are not ‘us’. We now not only have the ability to understand communal freedom and the ability to use it productively, but, if we do not use what we have, we may lose this opportunity.

It is foretold: if these times were not cut short, humanity would destroy itself.

The reason for that is: if we, as a community, do not have the will to take advantage of our ability to become truly free then those with greed for power will take advantage of our stupidity. The beastly will use knowledge to deny to those who refuse responsibility all their communal rights of intellectual freedom, forever.

What is human freedom?

- a) Human freedom is the freedom to know the truth about our creation and our potential for use of this knowledge for our intellectual advance.
- b) Human freedom is freedom to know, as a community, the truth about our abilities, our economic responsibilities and our potentials.
- c) Human freedom is our freedom to know and understand the advantages of governing ourselves and also the dangers of not governing ourselves. It is foretold: those who devote to truth will gain communal power of self-government.

Money Creation Belief Government

Why put money first? The reason to put money first is because we are talking about today. Money is now an alternative symbol for power. In early times 'power' was physical. Later power became the door to wealth. Then wealth and power became synonymous. Finally money, under control of those most devious, became the trade currency of "wealth and power". Those in control of power and wealth were then able to gain control over cultural development, science and government.

An essential understanding must therefore be to understand money and how it has been used to control and corrupt the mind and behavior of nations and peoples. Also how money is then used to force a community to bow to the will and act to the benefit of those who control money. As there is already much information on site I intend to make use of an anonymous article that appeared in my mail. Different expression often helps! Anonymous articles are not entirely unusual because many people feel afraid to speak openly against oppression.

Why am I not so afraid? Because I know something of the psychology of those with power! It would devastate them to think that someone without wealth, power of position or public image, could expose and endanger their world empire. They have to believe that they control the rank and file mind within safe limits or live in a nightmare world. In service to this ego they must allow the irrelevant to speak. It is therefore the nit-wits* who try to suppress our small voices who are the ones in danger. They are in danger because, if they suppress our voices or kill us, then an ever-widening public will say; "Ah, so these 'pig people' must exist, see, they are afraid of being exposed"; and this will anger the 'pig-people' because they need a low profile. (*nit-wit: the wit or intelligence of a tiny creature barely visible to the naked eye. Of course, if the rank and file does show signs of awakening Globalists will try to suppress.)

The poor are the most easily influenced, most easily deceived and the most easily victimized; they are also the most numerous. While the poor are normally the helpless stooges of the elitist class, these have the power of numbers and the power of passions; they are therefore a wild card in the deck.

The International Monetary System

In the past I avoided unaccredited articles and quotes because they are seen as unreliable.

But this does not mean that all are unreliable!

I am happy to give credit to a used work should the author becomes known to me.

In childhood I learned that I could not rely on what people said so I realized early that if I were to find the truth of anything I would have to find my own way.

One of the first things I learned was that truth was based on principles. For instance: the principles of photography that allowed making an image of the girl next door also enabled certain popular printing-press processes, astronomy and other useful work or research.

Further progress revealed that all of creation is based on principles of order and that disorder is simply the process of corrupted order returning to chaos or, alternatively, of chaos in process of being brought to order.

So now, in the late stage of my life I can feel confident enough to quote an article on my own responsibility simply because I see it states a social reality.

We can no longer look to authorities for reliability and the corrupt will favor the dubious.

Governments do not keep to National Constitutions and are not beyond tampering with records of events. We can not confidently accept official sources as reliable where matters of political or cultural importance are under review; we must look to the eternal order and to the nature of culture for verification.

Both man and machine operate in accord with relevant principles of order.

For this same reason you should not be concerned about who writes this. Be it a servant of God or the most common of commoners, the truth of it is not reliant on human authority, it is reliant on the authority of the order of the creation of which we are all part.

Or, as said in "Of Truth": "Truth is the reality of the order in which we exist".

That is a matter of principle.

As a community we are now at a grave disadvantage because we have been subject to a corrupted world culture. We are educated to believe that all opinion is equally valid but mature people know that is not true, nor does it become true even if we want it to be true!

That should not deter us.

It may require some effort to judge if what is said by one relates more reliably to the true order of things than what is said by another. However we are well armed if we know that truth does not rely on the authority of those who propose it.

To access truth we must base our perceptions on human realities.

What is important is whether information fits the reality of order in life's kaleidoscope.

We should feel confident that those serious in desire of finding life's reality will find success sufficient for their need. It does not matter if some are only perceptive enough to use others; it is the honest desire to know truth that allows us to sacrifice false belief.

The following, showing how money became a power for enslavement, should help.
It is shortened for your convenience.

WHAT'S A TRILLION?

*“Let’s put the amount of the US National debt into perspective
... as of the 17/10/03*

If you had gone into business on the day Jesus was born, and your business lost a million dollars a day, day in and day out, 365 days a year, it would take ... until ... 2737 to lose a trillion dollars.

The U.S. Congress has done seven times this damage to their constituents in a little over eighteen years!”

STATISTICS

This writer goes on to say that as of 2001, all income taxes are not enough money to pay the interest on the US National Debt (Yes the interest, not the debt itself). It is estimated that, at the present rate, this debt will grow to 18.28 trillion dollars by 2006.

Is this burden the future we want to give our children?

It does not have to be. A small island “Guernsey” (English Channel) was in this same situation some years ago. These people recovered prosperity by moving out of the international monetary system and printing their own money. But they were a small community and elected people they knew who would serve the common interest. The rest of the world, so far, has been happy to close its collective eye. That was also a few years before the present extreme of community brainwashing was accepted as normal.

United States Congressional Record - March 17, 1993 - Vol. #33, page H-1303 - Speaker-Rep. James Traficant, Jr. (Ohio) addressing the House:

“Mr. Speaker, we are here now in chapter 11. Members of Congress are official trustees presiding over the greatest reorganization of any Bankrupt entity in world history, the U.S. Government. We are setting forth hopefully, a blueprint for our future. There are some who say it is a coroner's report that will lead to our demise.”

How they make us poor!

After WW2, the 27 American TV companies including Zenith, Emerson, RCA, GE, etc. led the world in TV technology. Then, the owners of the patents on TV technology decided they didn't need to dirty their hands by actually making the TV sets themselves any more, and they started selling licenses to manufacture, which the Japanese bought.

By 1987, the only remaining American TV company is Zenith. The patent holders get their money, but the American products which can be sold overseas are gone, along with the jobs to make them.

The same happened in high-tech electronics. The integrated circuit was invented in the United States. But rather than focus on selling integrated circuits, the companies that owned that technology sold the machines to MAKE integrated circuits around the world, and now America sells very few chips anywhere. The patent holders have their money, but the cash flow from sales of manufactured goods, and the jobs that go with them, are gone.

The airplane was invented in the United States, and through the 60s, we sold a lot of them around the world. But lately, all aircraft sales to foreign countries involve "offsets", a portion of the core technology that gets licensed to the purchasing nation and gets manufactured there. Bit by bit, the core technology gets bled off, taking with it jobs, and cash flow from the sale of those manufactured products. Along the way, the rights to manufacture American inventions outside America leak away on a steadily increasing basis. Even the mighty F-16 is now being manufactured overseas, under license.

To cover the loss of manufacturing jobs, our government has invented the catch phrase "service economy". This is the idiotic notion that we don't need to actually sell manufactured products; that we can grow and prosper our nation by doing each other's laundry. To conceal the loss of manufacturing jobs, the government has legislated into existence thousands upon thousands of useless paper-shuffling jobs, and declared their necessity by fiat.

The most obvious is the income tax which has been so obfuscated by the government that half of you had to rely on an outside expert to figure out just what all those incomprehensible words really meant. By this device, the government has replaced those jobs that made products to sell with an equal number of jobs that produce nothing whatsoever of any worth, except to keep the unemployment figures down.

This over-burdening of the American people with gratuitous regulations and paperwork has accomplished nothing except to obfuscate the loss of manufacturing jobs, and to transform the American character from innovators and inventors creating new products to that of minor clerks, peeking under each other's seat cushions for lost change.

So, with most of our manufacturing now gone, just what DOES America make? Trouble, mostly. With 4% of the world's population and 18% of the economy, we have 50% of all the lawyers, all looking to make a killing by looting those few industries that still call America home Kids don't want to be scientists and engineers; they've seen how little such people are valued in our country. Based on recent history, kids see the "big bucks" are in corporate law, specifically investment banking, leveraged buyouts, greenmail, junk bonds, in short what other countries describe as "trying to make money grow by shaking it side to side.*

So, what do all these countries on the plus side of the trade imbalance do with their surplus billions? Well, they have been loaning it right back to us!

[As at January 2004 we find the smart lenders have been pulling money out and the value of the US $ has dropped by about 30%. Ed.]

“Our government engages in a practice politely called "deficit spending". Other terms which would aptly describe the practice include "counterfeiting" and "check kiting", but it all comes down to the same thing; spending money one does not actually have.

What would be a jailable offence for a normal citizen was rendered legal for the government by the Federal Reserve Act. This was not a popular piece of legislation. In fact the Democrats had campaigned in 1912 on a platform of rejection of the creation of a private bank in charge of a fiat money system. Nevertheless, on December 23, 1913, taking advantage of the absence of congressmen opposed to the creation of a fiat monetary system during the Christmas break, the Federal Reserve Act was passed.

*Years later, during the great depression, Congressman Louis T. McFadden (who served twelve years as Chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency) asked for congressional investigations of criminal conspiracy to establish the privately owned 'Federal Reserve System'. He requested impeachment of Federal officers who had violated oaths of office both in establishing and directing the Federal Reserve – imploring Congress to investigate an incredible scope of overt criminal acts by the Federal Reserve Board and Federal Reserve Banks. a) McFadden even suggested that the Federal Reserve deliberately triggered the great stock market crash of 1929, in order to eventually force the passage of the Emergency Banking Act of March 9, 1933, which suspended the gold standard.

In describing the FED, McFadden remarked in the Congressional Record, House pages 1295 and 1296 on June 10, 1932:

"Mr. Chairman, we have in this country one of the most corrupt institutions the world has ever known. I refer to the Federal Reserve Board and the Federal reserve banks. The Federal Reserve Board, a Government Board, has cheated the Government of the United States and the people of the United States out of enough money to pay the national debt. The depredations and the iniquities of the Federal Reserve Board and the Federal reserve banks acting together have cost this country enough money to pay the national debt several times over. This evil institution has impoverished and ruined the people of the United States; has bankrupted itself, and has practically bankrupted our Government. It has done this through the misadministration of that law by which the Federal Reserve Board, and through the corrupt practices of the moneyed vultures who control it".

[That was in 1932 but, as we saw at the beginning of this article, nothing was done about it.

However, for safety, the planned rip-off was kept on ice for another 50 years so people would have time to forget the terrible consequences and dire predictions of what could result from changes then made. Sadly, we, in our great majority, are now indoctrinated to believe that our 'democratic' government would not deliberately destroy us: either financially, morally or in any other way. So, the more glaringly obvious the tragedy the more tightly we close our eyes.

We are now unable to believe our government is not genuinely democratic so how can we believe they want us poor, powerless, pathetic and (preferably) passed away? Ed.]

“Why all the fuss over the gold standard?”

Well it goes back to the original Founding Fathers and the meaning of the word "dollar". "Dollar" is actually a weight measure of silver, 371.25 grains, to be exact. Our American silver dollars are actually heavier, since other metals were added for durability. But that 371.25 grains of silver WAS the dollar, matching in weight an unbroken chain of accepted monetary units that reached back through the Spanish Milled Dollar, the Dutch Daller, back to the German Thaler; the product of a silver mine which sold its product in coins of an exact weight. The Coinage Act of 1792 defined our dollar to exactly match in weight the silver dollars in use around the world, and then defined the gold dollar to be that amount of gold which would equal the worth of silver in a silver dollar, 24.75 grains, 1/15 the weight of the silver in a silver dollar.

*So, what's wrong with this? Nothing really. When you, as a citizen, hold a silver dollar or a gold dollar in our hand, you hold that actual worth of metal. Nothing the government can do can change the worth of the money in your control. **

Of course, carrying around too much coin can be bothersome, so many nations, including our own, issued paper notes as a convenience. But that paper currency of the nation was just a convenience. The gold and silver certificates were merely "claim checks" for the equivalent weight of gold or silver held in the treasury, and which would be produced on demand when the certificate was presented. ...

The problem with this system from the point of view of the government or the banks is that it limits the amount of money they can work with. When the bank runs out of silver or gold (or the equivalent certificates) it can no longer lend any more money with which to earn interest. When the government runs out of gold or silver (or the equivalent certificates) it can no longer spend money (just like the rest of us).

The immediate effect of ending the gold standard was that with the paper dollar no longer legally dependent on 371.25 in silver or 24.75 grains of gold, more paper dollars (now called "Federal Reserve Notes") could be printed, their worth no longer under the control of the citizens but under the control of the issuing central bank, based on the total number of dollars printed (or created as credit lines). The more dollars which are created out of thin air, the less each one is worth.

[Now remember: the Federal Reserve Bank is privately owned the Federal Reserve Board links it to the government – or the government to it. Ed.]

“A Federal Reserve Note.

The swindle of the system is simple. The Federal Reserve Bank hires the US Treasury to print up some money. The Federal Reserve only actually pays the treasury for the cost of the printing, they do NOT pay $1 for each 1$ printed. But the Federal Reserve turns around and loans out that money (or credit line) to banks at full face value, those banks which have exhausted their deposits then loan that Federal Reserve fiat money to you, and you must repay it in the full dollar value (plus interest) in work product, even though the Federal Reserve printed that money for pennies, or created it out of thin air in a computer.

As the Federal Reserve overprints more money, the money supply inflates, and too much money starts chasing too few goods and services, which means prices go up. But contrary to the charade put on by the Federal Reserve, inflation doesn't just come and go due to some arcane sorcery. The Federal Reserve can halt inflation any time it wants to by simply shutting down those printing presses. It therefore follows that both inflation and recession are fully under the control of the Federal Reserve.

Over time, that excess of printing has destroyed the value of that dollar you think you have. If you want to know by just how much, go out and try to purchase 371.25 in silver right now. Usually, the deterioration is gradual. Sometimes, it has to be obvious, such as the 1985 devaluation (done to halt the trade imbalance) which triggered the Japanese real-estate grab in this country.

Many [well some] politicians have attempted to reverse this process. John F. Kennedy issued an Executive Order 11110, requiring the Treasury Department to start printing and issuing silver certificates for the silver then remaining in the US Treasury.

Kennedy decided that by returning to the constitution, which states that only Congress shall coin and regulate money, the soaring national debt could be reduced by not paying interest to the bankers of the Federal Reserve System, who print paper money then loan it to the government at interest. This was the reason he signed Executive Order 11110 which called for the issuance of $4,292,893,815 in United States Notes through the U.S. Treasury rather than the traditional Federal Reserve System.

“John F. Kennedy's United States Note.

That same day, Kennedy signed a bill changing the backing of one and two dollar bills from silver to gold, adding strength to the weakened U.S. currency.

Kennedy's comptroller of the currency, James J. Saxon, had been at odds with the powerful Federal Reserve Board for some time, encouraging broader investment and lending powers for banks that were not part of the Federal Reserve system. Saxon also had decided that non-Reserve banks could underwrite state and local general obligation bonds, again weakening the dominant Federal Reserve banks".

b Kennedy's E.O. [Executive Order] was never implemented following his assassination, and shortly afterwards, United States silver coins were taken out of circulation and replaced with the copper clad slugs in use today. These two events, the failure to print new silver certificates, and the substitution of worthless slugs for our silver coins, may explain why the Warren Commission included on its panel John J. McCloy, a man with no experience in crime, law enforcement, or national security, but who had been the President of the Chase Manhattan Bank.*

It should be noted that the banks themselves are still using the gold standard. Accounts are still settled between major national banks by the transfer of gold bullion.

So here we are with a privately owned bank that legally counterfeits the money you borrow but expects a full value (plus interest) repayment. But what's good for the Federal Reserve is good for the government itself, and this is where we get back into that funny word "deficit spending". The government spends more money than it takes in. It has for many years now. The Federal Reserve, being the only lawful source of this fiat money, prints up the excess cash the government needs (or manufactures a credit line in a computer). This extra cash is treated as a loan, in order to keep the government overspending from further eroding the worth of the dollar in the world market. The government (meaning the taxpayers) is on the hook for the full face value, plus interest.

In order to keep the jobless rate from rising, a massive defense program called the Strategic Defense Initiative was cranked up, but since this program produced no exportable product, it produced no taxable sales revenues, and hence the money poured into the project accelerated the government decline into debt. Because manufacturing was on the decline, fewer start-up companies were approaching the lending institutions, so the government loosened up the rules (while increasing the insurable deposit limit) to allow "investments" in more high risk ventures, most of which turned out to be frauds, or worse, money laundering operations for drug criminals. This includes Whitewater, Flowerwood, and Castle Grande. Despite shifting the S&L loss primarily onto the taxpayers (to reassure foreign investors that the taxpayers still made America a safe place to park their surplus cash) the government plunged further into debt.

In the 12 years of the Reagan/Bush administrations, the United States went from being the world's largest creditor nation to the world's largest debtor. Many of those nations which had enjoyed huge trade surpluses started loaning that profit back to the United States with the stipulation that we work on our manufacturing, clean up our infrastructure, raise taxes, in short, clean up our act, so that investment in America makes sense!

“However, we didn't quite do that.

There has been some shuffling around to try to conceal the real scope of the problem. Over the last several years, the Federal Government has been sending less tax money back to the states than it takes in taxes. This means that the states have to borrow MORE money to cover their obligations. The net result is that the debt is being transferred to the states, to conceal its true size.

The government will easily admit to a $3 trillion "publicly held" debt, grudgingly concede that it's "unfunded liability" brings that number to almost $7 trillion, but the real hard truth is that total government debt, state and federal, is now over $14 trillion dollars, or about 50,000 for every man, woman, and child inside the United States. Since 1960, the taxpayers have shelled out $15 trillion in interest payments alone, while the principal continues to rise.”

[So we can see why money, if control is left in private hands, is a harlot that so easily corrupts governments and nations. For some time now all tax dollars have been swallowed directly by the great money swindle to pay interest on criminally assigned debts that are accepted by governments including the USA.

Meanwhile, whether U.S. taxpayer, pensioner or new-born baby, each owe, as part of rapidly growing government debt already well over $50,000. That does not include money owing directly by you or money owing by the business for which you work. We can argue about the technical working of this fraud but, so long as we bow to this system of criminal confidence trickery, its power to deceive, corrupt and rob is virtually unlimited.

*) How about the value of your U.S. dollar today, seventy years after the gold standard was disinherited: There are 480 grains to the ounce troy, so how much would your 24.75 grain dollar be worth with gold at $400 per ounce? My calculation: over $20. But the problem with the gold standard is that, although it was a good standard in the pre-industrial world, the value of gold is now more open to manipulation!

The strength of a motor or prime mover is measured in “horse power”. This was related to the work power of an average sort of horse. Once that figure was agreed on that was not open to manipulation; engines can become more powerful but their power is related.

The true value of a dollar is a measure of work produced by an average worker! That is a value that should be set and remain the legal value backing each dollar.

For example: if it cost one cent to take a letter from 'a' to 'b' one hundred years ago it should now, because of volume and technology, cost less to do the same job. Look up your records; probably, you will find it will now cost about twenty times more. So, in effect, the Federal Reserve System has, through 'your' government, robbed you of 19 of the 20 dollars you should now earn by legitimate work.

Find that hard to believe? Well remember in Gold Standard days a man could support a wife and family, now he can only support a small family with the aid of a working wife and often some hand-out from government. Also remember there was a time we could afford to build roads and railways that we now cannot afford to maintain?

You think you now live better but remember: our machines are vastly more productive and also remember that, because of waste-work procedures, most 'work-hours' today produce little of value at all.

How long can this robbery continue? In theory indefinitely! In practice it appears that the value of the $ will again halve within 20 years; your wages will not double but your tax and the percentage of the population below the poverty level will.

The mighty dollar may soon be a debt in your pocket!

And finally: remember how much your family now owes to the people who rob you!

But there is more. Ed.]

Your Retirement

"Yet another stunt the government has pulled is to "borrow" from the various trust funds under its control. Some $2 billion has vanished from the trust accounts of Native Americans (presently suing the Departments of the Interior and Treasury), and nearly ¾ of a TRILLION dollars has been removed from your Social Security retirement trust fund and spent in the last 8 years.

If the government has to borrow your retirement money when things are supposed to be so good, under what conditions can it repay the money? Or is that government IOU in your retirement account merely a promise to either tax you a second time or stiff you on the benefits you thought you were paying for?

In the last 8 years, during what are supposed to be record setting good times, the Federal government has nearly DOUBLED its debt load. ... Our government is so deep in debt that it cannot get out.

Collateral:

"This brings us to the issue of collateral. We've borrowed so much money the lenders are getting nervous. Back during the Johnson administration Charles DeGaulle demanded the United States collateralise the loans owed to France in gold and started carting out the bullion from the treasury. This caused several other nations to demand the same and President Nixon had to slam the gold window closed or the treasury would have been emptied, since the United States was even then in debt for more money than the treasury could cover in gold.

But Nixon had to collateralise that debt somehow, and he hit upon the plan of quietly setting aside huge tracts of American land with their mineral rights in reserve to cover the outstanding debts. But since the American people were already angered over the war in Vietnam, Nixon couldn't very well admit that he was apportioning off chunks of the United States to the holders of foreign debt. So, Nixon invented the Environmental Protection Agency and passed draconian environmental laws which served to grab land with vast natural resources away from the owners and lock it away, and even more, prove to the holders of the foreign debt that US citizens were not drilling, mining, or otherwise developing those resources. From that day to this, as the government sinks deeper into debt, the government grabs more and more land, declares it a wilderness or "roadless area" or "heritage river" or "wetlands" or any one of over a dozen other such obfuscated labels, but in the end the result is the same. We The People may not use the land, in many cases are not even allowed to enter the land. [Emphasis added.]

This is not about conservation, it is about collateral. YOUR land is being stolen by the government and used to secure loans the government really had no business taking out in the first place. Given that the government [As a servant of Globalism] cannot get out of debt, and is collateralising more and more land to avoid foreclosure, the day is not long off when the people of the United States will one day wake up and discover they are no longer citizens, but tenants."

The 'Equities' markets.

"...This brings us to the "equities markets", most notably the stock market. Over the last several years a constant media harangue has assured us that the soaring numbers of the stock market are the sole measure of how good our economy is. But close examination of those high-priced stocks reveals that most are heavily over-valued; their price the result of market forces rather than underlying worth (earnings ability). Amazon.com, as one example, has had a terrific run-up of its stock price, even though the company itself has yet to show a profit.

The government has admitted to using covert means to prevent a market downturn; to keep the stock prices at an artificially high and overvalued level, in order to wave those impressive numbers about as "proof" that everything is okay so that the taxpayers go back to work and pay more taxes. But in order to keep those stock prices up above their actual worth, demand must be maintained to keep the prices high. In other words, NEW investors must constantly be brought into the bottom of the pyramid to keep the prices of the stocks at the top from dropping. Hence the onslaught of commercials luring neophyte investors into the stock market via "online trading". Like any Ponzi scheme, the stock market will collapse when no more new buyers can be dragged in at the bottom.

In the end, there is no such thing as a free lunch. You cannot make money grow in value by shaking it back and forth from one bank to another. You cannot prosper a nation by doing each other's laundry, or filling out their government mandated and greatly obfuscated paperwork, or flinging stock certificates around which may have as little real worth as Federal Reserve Notes. To make money, to show a profit, you must make products that somebody else wants to buy, and sadly, that is a capability the United States [And other 'advanced' nations] has allowed to slip away in great measure. The "service economy" was political propaganda to make the public believe that the decline of our manufacturing ability was a good thing.

Our nation is broke, bankrupt, and having sold much of its machinery and technology (or given it away to political donors), is unable to easily return to those endeavors which once made our nation great. Our infrastructure is in decay (the percentage of roads in the US with major damage doubled last year alone), our public schools unable to produce a workforce able to function in a high-tech manufacturing environment, and those managers and engineers with manufacturing experience have in great part been lured away to other nations. [Emphasis Added.]

[This is revealing of how it is that the 'political greens' movement is so well funded and promoted. Yes, similar things are happening in Australia, New Zealand, Canada and other parts of the world. The world is in a lot of trouble but it only needs a few groups of people to start thinking for themselves to start an avalanche against the power grid.

Alternately many of us may live to see a time when the 'power mad' pulls the plug on a world overwhelmed with (fiat) debt.

A world where 'our' army will be shooting looters in 'our' streets!

A world when our already over-burdened and inefficient hospitals are closed to millions overcome by malnutrition and disease.

A world wherein we will be helpless to understand and react effectively.

The shame of it is that this story is so clearly written in world events. It is easy to see and to understand. Surely we are not too stupid or too lazy to open our eyes!

Today there are regular stories about new diseases! Diseases that could reduce world population by even as much as a third. AIDS is already killing millions. **

Only last night (Feb/18/'04) TV explained how bird flu might combine with a human flu to create a pandemic. Entirely natural of course and it was explained that while the risk was small it was real, and really serious; resulting deaths could number in millions.

What was not explained is that this recombination could be achieved by science.

Are we told these things are a natural danger so, when it happens, people will not know, or imagine, that a pandemic may have been Globalist created?

Or spread by terrorists on whom it may, so conveniently, be blamed?

We want to believe our government and mass media but all we will know for sure is that millions die. That time will most likely be set to coincide with world economic collapse.

When will we stir ourselves? We have already closed our eyes to so much evidence and understanding and allowed ourselves to become so politically manipulated that we elect known liars and find excuses for criminals. Our corruption is the natural result of corrupt philosophical belief. Good politicians are afraid to speak openly for fear of drastic reprisal but, by not speaking openly, they make their own elimination easy.

The writer of the above article asks at the end "Who's responsible for the National Debt?" Well we see that every man; woman and child may be held responsible. We, of voting age, are all directly responsible, but not because it is debt we created, or because 'our' government created it for our benefit. We are all responsible because we consistently refuse to take responsibility for "directly choosing" our own representatives.

We are just so happy to hire any self-chosen 'best liar' the money harlot is prepared to back. Those who push themselves forward are people who, in the great majority, are ignorant enough to sell their souls for a glamorous position. We pay their wages and if we continue to accept a world-wide crime syndicate as the power behind our government then we, and our children, will pay – but not in worthless money.

When knowledge and power are both beyond us. When poverty, strife and malnutrition weaken us, when understanding of scientific potential is hidden from us and we live submerged in a Shangri-La of entertaining pleasures, do not imagine that this debt will be gathered in worthless paper. That ‘pound of flesh’ will be demanded and backed by a government wrapped in debt. Banks and governments will declare themselves bankrupt and this debt will be paid in lives and misery.

Those lives that presently clutter the world and waste resources – those lives that accept gifts of pleasure and entertainment as payment for blind eyes – these are the lives that will become the final payment for communal irresponsibility.

Who Benefits?

*a) *b) To help solve a murder mystery there is an old and very useful saying: “Cui Bono” / “Who Benefits”!

This is equally useful when investigating national and international crime.

a) McFadden even suggested that the Federal Reserve deliberately triggered the great stock market crash of 1929, in order to eventually force the passage of the Emergency Banking Act of March 9, 1933, which suspended the gold standard.*

It is easy to see who benefited from the 1929 Stock-market crash, and how.

b) Kennedy’s E.O. [Executive Order] was never implemented following his assassination, and shortly afterwards, United States silver coins were taken out of circulation and replaced with the copper clad slugs in use today.*

Again we see that the crime overwhelmingly benefits only the International Money Manipulators. It, in fact, was essential to their program, that money NOT be returned to the gold standard as President Kennedy had planned.

*c) We create this reference point to remind readers of earlier editorials that show this site was not happy about the explanation for the multiple hijacking of 9/11, or who was to blame. We agree with the conclusion indicated by the above crimes. At that time the world had no evidence to suggest that terrorists had the knowledge, power and expertise to plan and carry out the 9/11 attack, and certainly no evidence of their having this power and expertise has come to light since.

9/11 was a very sophisticated operation; it was far more complex than a common highjack flown into a convenient building. It could not be carried out without inside knowledge of airline planning plus sophisticated technical resources.

Only Globalists have the money, power and influence to have intelligence services within national intelligence services; the economic power to guide and monitor airlines and manufacturing industries; and have highly trained operatives inside terrorist groups. That is what is needed to make a 9/11 operation possible while setting up genuine terrorists to do the up-front dirty work.

Was 9/11 to facilitate, and gain public support for, attacks on Afghanistan and Iraq?

We see that follow-up excuses for false promotions in relation to terrorists and international threats reveal very soft intelligence services.

However, despite all cover-up effort by stooge politicians, even dogs are now barking that these two nations were only chosen for attack because they suited the purpose of creating increasing global confusion, had a poor public image and no useful defense capability. That whole program was, overwhelmingly, to Globalist benefit and to Globalist plans to increase national bankruptcy, personal poverty, strife, frustration and world-wide hate.

It was also pointed out in editorial comment that had the need been to expose and forcefully remove WMD, then the exercise could have been carried out with minimum loss of life, minimum promotion of hate and minimum infrastructure damage.

The people who run world governments and the United Nations are very good at creating pairs of forces and manipulating them against each other so as to get their way without revealing their own involvement.

This has also been reported on, it is called the Hegelian Dialectic Process and is now well advanced in creation of world scale cultural-conflict.

See "Aids - A politically protected disease". Since that essay was printed new information has not produced conclusive evidence that AIDS was a natural disease or, if naturally produced was not artificially spread; or that serious effort was made to stop it. However the evidence increases that Globalism will undertake any level of atrocity in its attempts to attain its goal of world ownership.
